GeoVax Labs Inc. is headed to the 'burbs.

The Atlanta-based HIV/AIDS vaccine developer (OTC BB: GOVX) will move its corporate headquarters and laboratory operations from the Briarcliff campus of Emory University in Atlanta to Smyrna, Ga., on Nov. 3.

The company has been housed in the Emtech Bio incubator facility (a partnership between Emory University and Georgia Tech) since its formation in 2001. The new location at 1900 Lake Park Drive will have more than 8,400 square feet of office and laboratory space.

"This move will give GeoVax much-needed additional space for our current activities, as well as providing space to accommodate the addition of several new employees to our research and development staff and the resulting expansion of our operations," said Bob McNally, GeoVax president and CEO, in a statement. "The new facility will offer suitable space for our corporate needs while keeping our overall facility expenses in line... Our move is not only physical, but represents the continuing growth of GeoVax's leadership position in HIV vaccine technology."

The new facility is within an existing biotech building in a controlled-access campus, and will house all of the company's U.S. research and development, process engineering, quality control, regulatory and administrative operations.

GeoVax's net loss grew to $1.35 million in the second quarter as research and development costs rose.
